

How to be safe and smart online

Top tips to help you get the best out of being online while staying safe

Don't over share

- > It's important not to share too much information online, especially personal stuff like photos, as you can't always control what happens to it.
- > Never share information like your contact details or the name of your school with people you don't know. You wouldn't tell a random person at the bus stop where you live, so don't do it online.

Think before you post

- > Before you post that funny picture of your friend, or make a joke about someone on social media, ask yourself:
 - Would you find this post funny if it was about you?
 - What will your friend think about your post?
 - It may be funny, but is it kind?
- > A good rule is: if you wouldn't say it in real life, don't say it online.
- > Sexting (sharing sexual or naked photos) can be very risky. Did you know up to 8 out of 10 images people share online end up on other sites? For more info, visit www.childnet.com/sexting or www.buzz.org.uk/sexting.
- > Remember: once it's online it could be there forever.

Protect your reputation

- > Type your name into a search engine like Google – you'll be amazed at how much information there is about you. This helps to form your 'online reputation'.
- > One day when you apply for a job, your future boss might 'Google' you – make sure your online reputation won't put them off hiring you.
- > Remember: friends and family can Google you – will you be happy with what they see?
- > If you find something about yourself online that you don't like you can ask the website to remove it, or if it was posted on social media you can report it – see 'Don't like it? Block it, report it' (over the page).

Keep it private

- > Check the privacy settings on your social media accounts like Instagram or Snapchat to make sure you know what kind of information you're sharing about yourself.
- > Remember that your friends' privacy settings can affect what information about you is made public from their accounts.
- > If you need some help with checking your privacy settings, visit www.saferinternet.org.uk/advice-centre/young-people.
- > Keep your passwords private, and don't make them easy to guess – make sure people can't get into your account and pretend to be you.

Deactivate or delete

- > If you stop using a social networking profile or website, it's best to deactivate (hide the profile so no one can see it) or delete the account.
- > This means that the content is no longer live and it can't be searched for online.
- > It also means the accounts don't run the risk of being hacked (broken into) without you knowing.

Don't believe everything

- > Not everything or everyone online can be trusted.
- > Question what people online want from you and why.
- > Remember: not everyone online is who they say they are.
- > Never meet up with strangers you've been talking to online – they might have been lying about who they are, and could be dangerous.

Don't like it? Block it, report it

- > Social media sites have tools which let you 'block' people you don't want to be in contact with.
- > If you find something online that worries or upsets you, or you are being bullied online you can report it. It's also a good idea to tell an adult you trust and save evidence of what you've found.
- > For more info on blocking and reporting visit www.childnet.com/resources/how-to-make-a-report.
- > You can find more info on cyberbullying at www.buzz.org.uk/cyberbullying.
- > If you have met someone online and the conversations with that person are making you feel uncomfortable, tell an adult you trust or report it to the police at www.thinkuknow.co.uk.
